Arlington History

Located only a few hundred feet across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C., Arlington's proximity to our nation's capital has created a common history, connecting it to Washington, D.C. from the very day the city was first conceived. Originally part of the 10-mile square boundary of the Capital City, Arlington played a central role in the birth of our nation's capital, and in the formation of our country. Arlington City & County gets its name from the "Arlington House," the Robert E. Lee house located in Arlington National Cemetery. While there are no cities or towns located in Arlington County, Arlington is comprised of 5 distinct and active communities. In addition to the national cemetery, Arlington is also home to the United States Marine Corps Memorial (Iwo Jima), The Pentagon, LBJ Memorial Grove, and a host of other attractions.

The Arlington Visitors Orientation Center is located in the Pentagon Row shopping center, adjacent to the Fashion Centre at Pentagon City at:

1301 South Joyce Street,
Arlington, VA
(703) 416-0784;
Hours of Operation:
9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.
